

Probe 7 is an electronic project from Brent Heinze (keyboards) featuring Jasun Mark (vocals) based in Palm Springs, California. With their foundation firmly in the gay community, Probe 7 creates songs that celebrate the unique challenges and beauty of being LGBTQ+ including love, loss, pain, and hope. Their blend of new wave, industrial, synthpop, and rock influences create a danceable landscape paired with powerful vocals and a positive message.

Their latest album Transference features new tracks, live studio versions of some of the band's classic songs, and two new covers. Their tribute to the classic Psychedelic Furs track "Pretty in Pink (Isn't He)" tells the coming out story of a young man while songs like "Strange Angels" and "Don't Tell Me What Not To Say" encourage others to embrace themselves without fear of judgement or rejection. Band member Jasun Mark has produced a video for the song "88 Lines About 44 Dudes" featuring some of the band's favorite friends and fans. It is an homage to the classic song "88 Lines About 44 Women" by The Nails with a fabulous queer tint. This and many other Probe 7 videos can be found on YouTube.

Probe 7 has played live with many national touring bands including Leather Strip, Assemblage 23, Ludovico Technique, Ayria, Inertia, Hexheart, Provision, Voicecoil, and GayC/DC.
